

when you see a CLOUD

A small black and yellow striped bee is flying in a circular path around the word 'CLOUD'.

Becki Dudley

illustrated by Laura Watson

The next time that you see the sky,
a cloud or five just might float by.
Or maybe they will hang around
and cast their shadow on the ground.

A white rabbit is sitting on a green hill, looking up at a large, dark, stormy cloud. The sky is blue with other lighter clouds. There are some pink flowers on the hill next to the rabbit.

They could be thick or thin or tall
or form a great big stormy wall.

But sometimes they just hover there —
then disappear into thin air.

