Ending Cards

- And so the huge sheep was full at last, and the Three Bears were never seen again.
- And after that, Humpty Dumpty never let anyone bring a fiddle into the mine again.
- And so it was only with Cinderella's help that the shoemaker finished Humpty Dumpty's special shoes.
- After that, no one let Snow White make anything to sell in the marketplace ever again.
- And the fiddling was so fine, and went on so long, that the Gingerbread Man was freed at last.
- After that, the Seven Dwarves finally stopped repeating what the shoemaker had said.
- So at last the spoon hidden in the oven was found, and the mystery was solved.
- And so the herbs Puss in Boots had grown had solved the problem, once and for all.
- So Snow White saved the Cruel Sisters, and proved that hard work wins out in the end.
- And the Cruel Sisters were so amazed by their birthday that they forgave Goldilocks everything.
- And then, with their golden touch, the Three Bears chased the fox out of town for good.
- And with that, Cinderella had solved the mystery of the missing haystack.
- And that was when Goldilocks and Puss in Boots realized that telling the story had saved them.
- And so the fox escaped the mine, returning to the top of the beanstalk.
- And with the beans in his porridge, the Gingerbread Man was able to laugh once more.
- And even being baked in an oven didn't stop them telling riddles and annoying everyone to the end of their days.
- And so the Seven Dwarves discovered that a spinning wheel and a spoon could make anyone's fortune.
